THE Company is formed for the purpose of supplying what has long been urgently required, and which, from the increased and constantly increasing growth of our Commerce, is daily becoming more and more necessary; viz., a regular, speedy, and safe communication along the extensive line of coast and in the inner waters of China.

For conducting an immense Coasting trade, the Chinese possess nothing but unwieldy Junks, which are unable to perform their voyages except with the favorable monsoon; while European commerce, in the China waters, is carried on by sailing vessels, with the addition recently, of a very limited number of steamers owned by private firms; the postal and general passenger traffic being confined to the semi-monthly service of the Peninsular and Oriental Company between Hongkong and Shanghai.

To meet the necessities of both Foreign and native trade it is proposed to construct a fleet of steamers, which shall be the means of establishing a regular communication between the ports and places to which foreigners will have access, and of providing for the conveyance of passengers, mails, and general merchandize.

It is intended to commence with the construction of Six Steam-vessels, as the Directors propose to limit the operations of the Company until experience has proved in what way they can be best extended with advantage to the Shareholders.

The Power (under the control of the Shareholders in General Meeting) will be taken by the Deed for a future increase of Capital; and provision will be made for the extension of the Company's operations between China and Japan, as found expedient.

The extent of the trade already existing—its certain expansion—and the manifest necessity for the use of steam—warrant the conclusion that the

A powerful Paddle-wheel Steamer, 663 Tons, draft when loaded 10 feet.

NOTIFICATION.

BRITISH CONSULATE,
TIENTSIN, 5th April, 1862.

IT is hereby notified, for general information, that, from the 15th instant, the Shipping Business of this Consulate will be placed under the charge of H. B. M.'s Acting Vice-Consul at Taku, to whom the Masters of British vessels will, from the above date, report themselves upon their arrivals.

J MONGAN,
Acting Consul.

THE London Mail of 26th Feb., due in Hongkong on the 12th inst., and here on 17th. It was received last year on April 18th per Ganges.

THE P. & O. Co.'s steamer with the mail for Europe is appointed to leave on Saturday, the 19th instant.

WHEN a civilized State, or independant community of whatever extent, increases in population so as to endanger its sanitary condition, it is the bounden duty of the government, or other powers that be, to take measures at once to preserve the public health. Not only should every precaution be taken to ward off or ameliorate the ravages of endemic and epidemic diseases, but what is of more importance, public works should be constructed to prevent the seeds of these diseases taking root, in towns and cities especially. One of the chief works of a sanitary character is that of a proper system of drainage. For ages this subject has been the study of European civilization, from the Cloacæ of ancient Greece and Rome, to the vast system of sewerage in modern London. It is chiefly in the East, amongst semi-barbarous States, that we find those public works neglected. Hence, in a great measure, the unhealthiness of the land we live in, and the cause of much disease in the Settlement of Shanghai.

Ever since the establishment of the Municipal Council this has been a matter for grave discussion; and from time to time various projects have been brought forward to meet the growing evils resulting from such a rapidly increasing community, where the natural drainage is so deficient. Want of funds to construct efficient works has been the great drawback. The revenues from taxation, were not sufficient to commence a system of drainage upon a scale commensurate with the magnitude of the evils to contend with. Recently the question has been discussed on all points, by the Land Renters, the Municipal Council, the public, and the press; and the result has been so far satisfactory that the financial difficulty has been overcome by the legitimate means of raising a loan. Though the revenues of our small republic are insufficient to make the works, they are ample to pay a liberal interest on the money to be borrowed. The Municipal Council have taken the initiative, and launched upon the troubled waters of the monetary world, their paper boat, which they expect quickly to return, laden with sycee.

In venturing on this financial step towards the accumulation of a Public Debt, our newly elected Municipal Council have assumed a grave responsibility. Not, be it remembered, so much on account of raising the loan, as the manner in which the sum borrowed shall be expended. With the very liberal interest offered, the security given, and the issue of the stock at par, we see no difficulty in obtaining double or treble the amount asked for. The points for consideration are—is the sum named sufficient for the purposes intended, and will these monies be judiciously laid out? We do not question the pressing necessity of the object for which the loan is to be raised, for that is of a thoroughly legitimate character. But may not the interest to be given, and the speedy manner in which the loan is to be paid off, cramp the energies of the Council in other directions. We have every confidence in the judgment of the gentlemen who sit at the Council Board; and we think that they have done right in accepting and putting into operation the recommendation of the Committee of Improvements appointed by the Land Renters, therefore we acquiesce in the financial principle recognized in endeavouring to raise this loan for sanitary purposes, viz: that posterity will benefit by the works to be constructed, therefore it is only just and right that they should be taxed to pay the interest on the money borrowed.

This being the "maiden leap" of Shanghai into the alluring regions of debt, it may not be out of place to record the warnings of financiers and publicists as to the appropriation of monies borrowed for public purposes. It has been said with truth that "the financial condition of States has become a question of such vast importance in the progress of civilization, that it may be ranked amongst the very first duties of a government, under whatever form it may be carried on. All other parts of the State machinery, however well proportioned or nicely balanced, will avail but little when the finances of a country are controlled by an unskilful hand, or by those who squander away the national resources, regardless of consequences or of the public credit. The financial condition of a State is also so intimately connected with the social, moral, and religious welfare of the people, that the connexion may be traced with surprising minuteness in every kingdom throughout the world; and neither a fruitful soil nor a genial climate will compensate for the misappropriation of the funds abstracted from the produce of labour and skill."

COMBINED NAVAL AND MILITARY EXPEDITION AGAINST THE REBELS NEAR SHANGHAI.

THE following are the details of the attack upon the rebel camp, and defeat of the Taipings at Wong-ka-dza, noticed in our issue of Saturday, the 5th instant:

The English naval force consisted of three companies of small-arms men, numbering 240, from H. M. S. Imperieuse, under Captain Willes, R.N., C.B.; three 12-pounder howitzers and 72 men under Captain Borlase, C. B., of H. M. S. Pearl; 100 Marines under Captain Holland R.M., and 30 seamen in charge of portable bridges, under Lieutenant Bosanquet of H. M. Gun-boat Plumer—in all about 442 marines and blue-jackets, commanded by Admiral Sir James Hope, K.C.B. The French naval force brought into the field by Admiral Protet, consisted of about 100 marines, 200 sailors, with five small rifled howitzers, two 6-pounders and 100 Chinese Artillerymen, making a total of 400 men.

The English military force commanded by Brigadier-General Staveley, comprised 52 of H. M. 99th Regt. of infantry; 500 of the 22nd Punjaub N.I.; and 430 of the 5th Bombay N.L.I., altogether 991 strong. There were no French troops. Of the Royal Artillery about 75 men mustered under Captain Bradshaw with one 24-pounder howitzer, one nine-pounder gun, and four mountain howitzers. Of disciplined Chinese under Colonel Ward, about 200 were brought into the field—so that the whole force of combatants would stand thus: Allied Naval Brigade 842, British troops 1,068, Chinese troops 200; total 2,108. Of non-combatants there were 150 disciplined Chinese lascars attached to Bradshaw's Battery for dragging the guns, and several hundred carrying ambulances for the wounded and extra ammunition for the guns and men.

On Thursday the 3rd, the artillery with their heavy guns—the mountain howitzers having been sent to Sik-a-way the previous night—started from their barracks at daylight; the 99th also leaving at that hour as an escort to the guns. The Indian troops did not move before seven o'clock, at which hour the 5th Bombay N. L. I. proceeded out by the Stone Bridge road, and joined the 22nd Punjab N. I. at Sik-a-way, where they halted for some time. The guns went on with the escort of the 99th and half a company of each regiment, as they had some difficult bridges to cross, which would allow the troops to come up with them, as they afterwards did, before arriving at any suspicious part of the country. The British Naval Brigade landed from the ships of war in harbour at 10h. A.M., and marched through the Settlement, following the troops along the Sik-a-way Road, to the westward of Shanghai.

During the previous night a dense mist spread over the face of the country which cleared away about 8h. A.M., when the sun shone out almost oppressively warm for the season of the year. As each combatant was laden with three days' provisions, and a blanket, the heat was so much felt, that two or three of the Indian troops dropped out of the line of march during the day, from fatigue. As each detachment arrived at Sik-a-way the men rested for an hour to have some refreshment. They then pushed on to Chepoo, the rendezvous for the night. This is a large deserted village, and afforded shelter for the whole force. It is situated on Pagoda Creek about 6 miles from Sik-a-way, and some 9 miles from the Rebel camp at Wong-ka-dza.

At daylight on Friday, the 4th April, the whole force moved out to the rebel camp, and drew up in quarter-distance columns; the 99th in front of the mass of columns in skirmishing order, with the Artillery in their front; the English Naval Brigade on the right flank, supported by the 5th Bombay and 22nd Punjabees, with the French Naval Brigade on the left. It was expected that Ward with his Chinese troops would have reached the rebel camp from the South, and kept the enemy from escaping in that quarter, but they did not arrive until after the attack.

From Chepoo the force obtained guides to the rebel camp, and traversed the road, so frequently passed before by the Admiral and General in their reconnaissances. A dense mist shrouded the country, so that when they halted in front of the intrenchments nothing but a nebulous landscape was visible. Much trouble was encountered in carrying the heavy guns across the creeks and ditches when they had to be launched sometimes bodily down the one side and hauled up the other, where the banks were perpendicular.

By 8h. A.M. the whole force was assembled, when the fog began to lift and exposed the besiegers to the besieged. At this time the sight was very fine and warlike. The array of our troops with their bayonets glittering in the morning sun, showed the bright panoply of European arms; while the long line of of formidable intrenchments extending for nearly two miles, fringed with rebel banners innumerable, exhibited the semi-barbarous mode of Chinese warfare, although indicating that there was hot work in hand.

At this time a small party of the rebels ventured outside the intrenchments to reconnoitre, when, after firing a few random shots, they retired. The entire force then advanced under cover of the graves and mounds, until they came within a few hundred yards of the nearest stockade, but which they could not reach from a creek being in the way, and impassable. This caused an alteration in the general movement, when a detour was made to the left flank through a ruined village, with clumps of trees here and there. The 99th as the advanced party, got within 60 yards of the rebel defences, under good cover. Behind them came the Artillery and the naval guns, numbering in all 15. At a quarter to nine these opened fire with round-shot, shell, and shrapnell, which was returned by the enemy with a brisk fusillade from jingalls, muskets, and rifles. The whole attacking force then kept up a continuous fire for about half an hour, which completely silenced the enemy, when they ceased firing. The casualties on our side during this part of the engagement, consisted of 1 private 5th Bombay N.L.I. killed; Asst.-Surgeon Escott of the Snake, wounded, and 2 privates of the 22nd Punjaub N.I. wounded.

By this time it was seen that what was previously supposed to be one large encampment, was in reality a cluster of stockades, each one surrounded with barricades formed of timber from ruined houses, broken furniture and other things filled in with mud, forming a strong parapet and not easily to be scaled. These were nearly all protected by wet ditches, rendering them still more formidable. Without artillery it would have been most difficult to have captured these, and then not without great loss on our side. As it was, the howitzers told with beautiful effect upon the parapets and inside the intrenchments, where some rockets made good practice also.

When the firing ceased, the rebel fire had dropped from the parapets and the enemy were seen escaping from the stockades in all directions. Lieutenant Tulloh of the 22nd Punjaub N.I. crossed the ditch with four of his men and entered the deserted camp, where the rebels had left everything behind them—ammunition, provisions, flags, pouches, &c.

Immediately it was found that the stockades were evacuated, the whole force was ordered in pursuit—the 99th to the right with the small-arms men of the Imperieuse, the 22nd to the left, and the 5th in the centre towards Yu-ki-tsoo, while the 200 of Ward's men as skirmishers, did considerable execution among the fugitives. The pursuit commenced about 10h. 30m. and was continued for many miles, scouring the whole country south, west and north for two hours. With the enemy it was a race for life, so, to render themselves more fleet of foot, they disencumbered themselves of their clothes, numbers of them plunging naked into the ditches and creeks, where many were shot down. The main body of them managed however to get away in this destitute condition, and as they were all long-haired Taipings, doubtless they would be known, and receive no mercy at the hands of the people, who they had so cruelly and wantonly plundered. A party of the 22nd under Major Stafford got well ahead of everything and cut off a good number, as also did the 99th, who brought down about 30. It is difficult to say what was the strength of the rebel force, but it cannot have been less than 4 or 5,000. Of this not more than 300 were killed, and those were nearly all outside the encampment. Their bodies were much emaciated, showing that they had been on a very short allowance of food for some time; while all the provisions found in the stockades only amounted to some 20 bags of rice.

Finding it impossible to come up with the foremost of the flying enemy, the whole force was re-called and marched back to Chepoo. As they returned numbers of ponies were caught—the Imperialist troops from Yu-ki-tsoo having set fire to the straw huts and bedding in the stockades, which ignited the powder magazines, blew them up, and drove out the frightened ponies on the rebels in all directions. As the force was on its way to Chepoo, they met Colonel Ward with 1,000 of his disciplined Chinese, about 2 o'clock, having arrived from the South, without having seen the enemy or doing any damage. Had these troops arrived at Wong-kadza as was expected in the morning before the attack, so as to cut off the enemy's retreat, not half of the rebels would have escaped.

While the pursuing force returned to Chepoo for the night, Admiral Sir James Hope remained behind with Ward at his men, for the purpose of accompanying them to a different stockade from any seen before, and which Ward stated to be a small one, he intended taking on his way back to Sung-kiang. It appeared that Ward's men had just travelled seventy-two miles on a stretch, without having obtained any food for their way, and they arrived hungry and fatigued, yet their commander resolved on obtaining some glory for his men, by attacking a strong stockade without artillery. The British Admiral with only his personal staff joined the party. They pursued a road along the bank of a creek until they came to a village named Lu-ka-kong, when it turned abruptly off to the left, where a trifling intersects, forming angles like the letter T. Here the road strikes a smaller branch, about 30 feet wide, the only means of crossing which is by a bridge of granite slabs about two feet broad. This bridge led to the stockade, and was strongly defended by a battery on the opposite side mounting eight or ten heavy jingalls, forming a skilfully constructed tete-du-pont. Ward's men made a rush across the bridge, but they encountered a fierce fire from the barricade, which checked their progress. After making repeated attempts to force the passage they were ultimately pelled to retire. Unfortunately in the skirmish Sir James Hope, who evidently advanced to advise Ward to withdraw his men, received a bullet wound in the leg, which passed through the upper part of the calf to near the ancle. Of all the casualties of the day this was the most to be regretted as it disabled the master spirit of the expedition.

Of Ward's men 5 foreign officers were wounded, and 70 privates killed and wounded. In this repulse the commander of the Chinese troops, had under-estimated the strength of the enemy, and over-estimated the efficiency of his men, without support from artillery. They retired upon Chepoo, where the British Admiral had his wound dressed, and those of Ward's men were carefully attended to by the military surgeons.

On the following morning, Saturday 5th April, the English and French Admirals resolved upon attacking this camp, which seemed, if anything more formidable than Wong-ka-dza. Brigadier-General Staveley declined sending his troops, but agreed to remain in garrison in case of a reverse. Accordingly the whole combined English and French naval forces, with their artillery, marched to Lu-ka-kong at 7 A.M. As they came in sight of the bridge it was ascertained that a well-constructed and cleverly placed stockade had been built during the night, showing a further obstacle to attack. The naval force drew up in contiguous quarter-distance columns with the guns advanced about two hundred yards in front, Ward's regiment being placed some distance away on the right it halted in front of the tete-du-pont, where they had been repulsed on the preceding afternoon.

The guns opened fire at about 300 yards upon the newly erected stockade; while two companies of Ward's contingent were thrown out in skirmishing order on the right, and advanced under cover of the graves and mounds so as to form a semicircle, resting on the allied guns and the cross-creek—thus nearly enclosing the rebel advanced works. Ward's men pushed on beautifully and in excellent order from cover to cover; while the rebels, notwithstanding the heavy pounding of the artillery, kept up a brisk fire upon them, by which five men were killed and two officers with seven men wounded.

Having stolen up to within a hundred yards, Ward's men made a most gallant rush—cheering in the English manner—causing the rebels to abandon their outworks. The entire allied force then moved forward and crossed the river as rapidly as possible, when the whole mass of Taipings fled from all their defences without firing a shot.

This camp was found to be nearly double the size of that destroyed at Wong-ka-dza, and consisted of eleven or twelve strong detached stockades, covering a space of upwards of two miles on the Pagoda Creek—which was found barred across at this spot, by an earthen mound—and three others on the cross creek; besides one or two small intrenched villages. Each of these works was surrounded by a wet ditch; palisades and t'hevaux-de-frise, and could hardly have been taken without the fire of artillery. No provisions of any kind were found, but immense quantities of gunpowder were blown up, as the works were fired, when numerous heavy explosions followed each other in succession.

The rebel force at Lu-ka-kong was quite double that at Wong-ka-dza, or say 8,000 men. As they retreated from the encampment they threw away a prodigious quantity of arms. They retired in tolerably good order, chiefly in consequence of their knowing that their pursuers could not overtake them; but the rapidity with which they abandoned the whole of their immense line of intrenchments immediately the first small outwork fell, shewed how much they had been demoralized by the news of the defeat of their brethren at Wong-ka-dza; convincing all the officers present that with a powerful artillery force every rebel post in the province might be taken with ease, and a mere nominal loss, on receiving the news of the capture of the camp at Wong-ka-dza.

Brigadier-General Staveley with the troops returned to Shanghai the same day, and next morning (Sunday) the allied Naval forces marched back to their vessels in a heavy rain—which, fortunately for the expedition, did not come on until all was over. Thus concluded the strongest and most successful attack by foreigners upon the Taiping rebels near Shanghai which has yet occurred; with the most satisfactory results as to the insignificant loss of men on our side, and the complete dispersion of the bloodthirsty insurrectionists from the vicinity of the Settlement. This is but the beginning of the end, when the vigorous policy of Sir James Hope in aiding to suppress this rebellion will be successfully carried out, so that these pests of humanity and their blasphemous leaders at Nanking, will be at least driven from the provinces where it is essential for our prosperity that commerce and native industry should be allowed to develope themselves for the mutual benefit of all. What we regret most is the untoward "chance of war," which has disabled for a time our able and esteemed commander-in-chief of the British Naval forces, who has countenanced all along this legitimate war against a common enemy.

THE WEATHER.

March, 1862.—According to the prognostications of our Shanghai Almanac, based upon many previous year's experiences, this month should have been wet and disagreeable. This year it has proved an exception to the rule, for it was dry and bracing, with a generally clear atmosphere. On the 11th it snowed in the morning and evening, the flakes lying upon the ground until noon next day in exposed places. There were only four days on which it rained, and two of these were light showers only in the forenoon and afternoon. The maximum range of the thermometer in the open air during the day was 37°—58°, and the mean 48°; the minimum range at night was 29°—48° and the mean 38°. At the beginning of the month the prevailing winds were from the North and East, when they became variable at the Equinox, veering round to the S.E., and indicating the change of the monsoon. As the month closed, the weather became mild and genial, causing the trees and shrubs to send forth their buds, and the grass to spring up rapidly, realizing the beautiful language of England's charming poet of the Seasons, when he sings—

Come gentle Spring, ethereal mildness come,
And from the bosom of you drooping cloud,
While music wakes around, veild in a shower
Of shadowing roses, on our plains descend.

The following meteorological report for the month, kindly furnished by J. G. Dalton Esq., the Master of H.M.S. Imperieuse, will be valued by our Nautical readers:—

REPORT.

The Trustees of the British Episcopal Church at Shanghae now lay their Report for the past year before the Pew Renters.

The receipts and expenditure as appear in the Treasurer's accounts, are much the same as usual, the increase in the latter of about Tls. 600, arising from the effect of Resolution No. 2 at the last annual meeting, which authorised the Treasurer to pay to the Chaplain the deficiency upon his salary caused by the exchange. Instead of raising it as heretofore by voluntary subscription.

The balance remaining in the Treasurer's hands on the 31st December last was Tls. 2,317.59.

The Trustees now lay before the Meeting the correspondence with H. M. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs about the grant in aid of the erection of a new Church. It will be observed that if the proposed Church is but t. the Government will contribute a sum of £2,000 towards it. But even with this, and the somewhat increased subscriptions they have received these funds are scarcely sufficient to build, at the present very exorbitant rate of material and labor.

The present edifice is decaying daily, and will not much longer be safe, and they propose therefore that a tempo ary building be immediately put up to supply the place of the present until the completion of the new Church. With the aid of the materials of the present Church, this may be done at an outlay of Tls. 4,000, and six months hence some change in the state of affairs here may have taken place which will render building cheaper. In any case it would be necessary to put up a temporary place of worship during the erection of the new building.

The following estimates are laid before the Meeting:—

|---|---|---|
| To build the Church now by contract, ..... | Tls. | 29,403 |
| Iron work to be ordered from England, ..... | „ | 25,000 |
| Total cost, | „ | 54,403 |
| To which must be added, Cost of temporary building. ..... | „ | 4,000 |
| | | 58,403.00 |
| To meet which we have: Donations from the community, ..... | „ | 20,800 |
| Loans promised, .... | „ | 15,250 |
| Government grant in aid £2,000, say ..... | „ | 6,000 |

If building materials and labor were at the ordinary cost, some Tls. 6,000 might be saved upon the estimated outlay.

The Trustees would therefore propose that steps should immediately be taken to erect a temporary church, and that a period, say of six months, should be suffered to elapse before any further steps are taken; and that, if by that time, the reduction in cost of material or increase of subscriptions do not enable them to proceed with the works the plans be modified to meet the means at their disposal. To construct the church without the tower would reduce the cost of the building nearly one-third, and there would then be ample provision for the needful expenditure.

The Trustees have to call the attention of the meeting to the necessity of appointing another Trustee in place of Mr. James L. Mun, who has left Shanghai.

BRITISH CONSULATE,
SHANGHAE. 24th March, 1862.

SIRS,—By the Mail which arrived yesterday from the Northern Ports I received a letter from H. M's Minister, &c., announcing the intention of H. M.'s Government to contribute a sum of Two thousand Pounds towards the erection of the New Church.

I enclose a copy of the letter herewith, and an original letter from the Office of Works to which it gives cover. The latter I beg you will return after perusal.

I am, Sirs,
Your Obedient Servant.

H. M.'s Consul.

To the Committee of the Trustees of Trinity Church,
Shanghai.

No. 11.

PEKING, 18th February, 1862.

SIR,—Referring to your Despatch No. 84 of last year, I have to inform you that H. M.'s Secretary of State has been in communication with the Board of Treasury with regard to the propriety of making a Government Grant in aid of the expense of building a new Church at Shanghai, and that, subject to the plans and specifications being considered satisfactory by H. M.'s Chief Commissioner of Works, to whom they are to be submitted by Messrs. Stephens and Robinson, it is the intention of H. M.'s Government to contribute a sum of Two thousand Pounds, towards the new Church.

I am, &c., &c., &c.
F. W. A. BRUCE.

February 24th.

I enclose copy of a letter from the Board of Works stating that the First Commissioner approves the plans for the new Church at Shanghai.

W. H MEDHURST, Esq.,
H. M. Consul,
Shanghai.

OFFICE OF WORKS,
December 3rd, 1861.

SIR,—With reference to your letter of the 19th ultimo, respecting the proposed Church at Shanghae, I am directed by the First Commissioner of H. M.'s Works, &c., &c., to state for the information of Earl Russell that he has carefully examined the plan of Messrs. Stephens and Robinson, with the aid of Mr. Pennethorne, the Architect of this Department, and that he is of opinion that the plan is very convenient and suitable for its purpose, and that the architectural design is good and effective.

In consequence of the liability of wood to decay in that climate, iron is proposed to be used to as great an extent as possible.

The frame work of the roof is to be of iron covered with tiles, and it is to rest on columns of iron. The remainder of the building is to be of either brick or stone. Provision is made for securing coolness during the hot season by means of an external arcade as well as by spaciousness in the interior.

The estimate is £15,000, which is a very large sum if the capacity of the building is to be tested by the number of sittings, for it contains only 600 sittings; but it must be remembered that on account of the heat of the climate a much larger space is allowed for each sitting than would be allowed for a church in England. The great cost of the proposed church arises from the difficulty of obtaining a good foundation, from the alleged necessity of an external arcade, and from a large tower which will cost about one-third of the total amount.

Mr. Stephens stated that he was in communication with the residents, and expected that they would be able to provide the necessary funds; but it appears to the First Commissioner that, if they should be unable to do so, the cost of the proposed building may be diminished by the omission of some parts of it. If, however, the plan remains unaltered, the First Commissioner can have no hesitation in saying that it is one to which the approval of H. M.'s Government may properly be given.

The papers which accompanied your letter are returned herewith.

I am, &c.
(Signed) ALFRED AUSTIN,

H. M. despatch-boat Ringdove arrived this morning from the Peiho vid Chefoo, with dates from Peking to the 3rd and Tientsin to the 5th instant.

It is reported that H. M. Plenipotentiary, the Hon. Mr. Bruce, has notified that British subjects may in future visit Peking without obtaining his special permission to do so, and that they will only require the Consular passports provided by the Treaty.

In the Peking Gazettes forwarded to us there appears an edict from the Emperor, prohibiting the use of opium by the mandarins, literati, and military under pain of punishment.

The Ringdove encountered severe weather on her passage up, in the Yellow Sea and Gulf of Pecheli. Several junks with their crews were lost in the heavy squalls and dust-storms from the N.W.
